The supreme extent of management is “virtues in mind and positive in actions”. For “positive in actions”, it is necessary to have “virtues in mind” and it is virtues in mind that accomplished positive in actions. It should be noted: virtues in mind and positive in actions cannot be put upside down: virtues in mind first before positive in actions. This is the logic of Chinese management philosophy, which is particularly expressed as: “the one with the desire to govern the state needs to first have a complete family; the one with the desire to have a complete family needs to first cultivate the moral character.”
